The defense sprung somewhat of a surprise by bringing testimony to prove that Keysor had tried to buy witnesses to convict Mackay and Parks.

Three witnesses testified that in a saloon in Murray, Maxifield, who had been herding the sheep for Mackay and Reysor, had made the statement that he (Maxifield) had received $56, and was to get $560 more and the lease of a hand of sheep from Keysor if he would convict Mackay and Parks of embeszling sheep. This statement was made to a company in the U. P. saloon at Murray, Edward Mackay, a brother of the defendant, being one of the company.

The defendant took the stand at 2:45 this afternoon. He stated that he was a resident of Murray: had lived there the most of his life: was married and had a family: desired that he had received 10,000 head of sheep from Keysor; at first, in 1893, he got 5,000 head, and in 1855, the time of the contract, he had but 15,000 sheep belonging to Keysor. He objected to the contract, he had but 15,000 head of sheep belonging to keysor. He objected to the contract at the time he signed it, and told Mr. Yeysor that he had but 15,000 head of sheep belonging to him. The balance of the 10,000 promised in the contract were for moncy obligations and sheep that he was behind. Mr. Keysor encouraged him to keep in the sheep business and try to make defendant took the stand the sheep business and try to make city.

At the time he made the contract he had other sheep in the herd with Keysor's, some belonging to Mrs.
Boutt of Salt Lake, and to Thomas Alcock, his herder; also 2.800 head from Charley Damzier, 3,000 head from Charley Damzier, 3,000 head from Mr. Harmon, in all about 16,000 head. The result showed no discrepancies from the Lake Bonneville company, although the spring was the worst he had ever seen. He lost 6,000 head out of the 15, 600. The Alcock sheep were left with him to sold and he sold them. These are the ones soid to Andrew Swensen, in the fall of 1896 there were only 6,000 head of the Keysor-Bout sheep. The following winter of 1896-9; was very hard. There was a severe storm about the 20th of February, 1897, and nearly all of the sheep perished. He hailed the pelts to Kelton and sold the most of them to Mr. Jones, He could not get more than one-half the pelts of those that died. He sold about 200 head of "given out" sheep.
